ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

A method and apparatus for sending information on a network comprising of receiving a message from a host computer, the message comprising of header information and data descriptors about data that is transmitted with the header information. Obtaining the data from the host computer, inserting the data in the message, and sending the message toward its destination.